5 Pillars of Affordable Housing Policy

Equity in Place is a diverse group of strategic partners from organizations led by people of color and housing advocacy organizations working to advance housing justice and equitable community development. We believe that housing policy must be informed by five key pillars (5 Ps) that center our communities and move toward transformative systemic change.

Placement

The location and type of housing must be directed by communities most impacted and have access to essential daily needs like transit and healthy foods.

Preservation

Existing affordable housing must be maintained at truly affordable levels and improved as needed to remain safe, livable and healthy for the same residents.

POWER Renters and communities most impacted and historically marginalized must be centered in and have lasting influence on the decision-making processes that impact their housing stability.

Protection

Existing renters and homeowners must have the tools and rights to remain in their homes and not experience the impacts of housing instability or displacement.

Production

New housing units must be produced at a diversity of affordability levels with a commitment to using public resources for the most deeply affordable housing.
